COBB COUNTY, GA (CBS ATLANTA) - The Cobb County Board of Elections and Registration called a meeting Friday to discuss ongoing litigation, and decided not to contest a petition filed in Superior Court by voters to call for a re-vote on Sunday alcohol sales for unincorporated Cobb County.

Last November, and earlier this month, people who live within the city limits of Acworth, Kennesaw, Marietta, Powder Springs, Austell and Smyrna were given the chance to vote on Sunday alcohol sales within their city limits, but not in the outlying county. According to the petition filed by voters, residents should have been able to vote on both questions, not just the one pertaining to their city limits.

That left about 90,000 voters, who live in incorporated Cobb county cities, out of the process to decide on Sunday alcohol sales in the unincorporated county.

County officials spotted the mistake, and reported it, after the March 6 elections. There will be a re-vote on July 31.

"That is our general primary date, so we'll have lots of things on the ballot," said Cobb County Elections Director Janine Eveler. "We hope that a lot of people will come out and vote."

Cobb County passed the referendum in March and stores were planning to start Sunday alcohol sales by June 1. Stores that are located outside city limits will now have to wait until early August, assuming voters decide in favor of Sunday sales in the July re-vote.
